NATIONAL IVORY AND RHINO HORN ACTION PLAN
2018 – 2020
(Attached to Decision No. 2713 / QD-BNN-TCLN, dated 10 July 2018 by the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development)

I. BACKGROUND

In recent decades, Viet Nam is recognized as a transit country for wildlife trade with foreign, transnational and intercontinental origin. The illegal wildlife trade, especially of ivory and rhino horn not only negatively impacts national security, conservation objectives, sustainable livelihood of the people but also reduces the effectiveness of management, control and law enforcement on wildlife trade. Nowadays, illegal wildlife trade is considered to be a dangerous organized crime of the same magnitude as the smuggling of drugs, arms and human trafficking.

Rhinos and elephants are two endangered, precious and rare species in the world, which play important roles in the ecosystem and symbolically represent many countries in the world, especially African countries. However, in the past few decades, the number of rhinos and elephants has been severely reduced due to illegal hunting for rhinoceros horns and ivory. In Viet Nam, rhinoceros are considered to be extinct after the last individual was found shot down in Cat Tien National Park in 2010. With a population of about 104 to 134, Viet Nam’s wild elephants (Elephas maximus) are mainly distributed in central, central highlands and southern Viet Nam, and have an Emergency Plan for Elephant Conservation in place for conservation and towards the development of the number.

Despite international and domestic efforts, the illegal wildlife trade of particularly ivory and rhino horn still goes on at a certain scale and cause challenges to management and control. The illegal trade of parts and derivatives from ivory and rhino horn still occur in some areas of Viet Nam with increasingly sophisticated modus operandi. According to the statistics compiled by the Viet Nam CITES Management Authority, from 2016 to the beginning of 2017, the law enforcement agencies have investigated and seized tens of cases relating to the trade of ivory and rhino horns, specifically 12 tons of ivory and 230 kg of rhino horns. This is the result of the relentless efforts of the customs, polices, border guards, market surveillance, forest rangers at all levels nationwide. Statistics on the investigations, prosecutions, convictions of criminal offences and violation of administrative regulations from October 2016 to November 2017, in relation to illegal import, export, transport, trade, processing, possessing, advertisement, consumption of wildlife, including ivory and rhino horns showed that among 87 cases/127 suspects, 37 suspects have been sentenced to imprisonment for up to 3 years, while 3 imprisoned for 3–7 years.

Viet Nam joined CITES since 1994 and has always been a responsible member. The legal documents in Viet Nam related to the management of wildlife trade in CITES appendices are assessed as comprehensive and suitable for national regulation and its legal framework has been rated in the first-class by CITES. In practice, the application of legal regulation to the handling, investigation, prosecution, judgement of the related cases still faces so many challenges due to the restriction of information. The achievements in law enforcement listed above are commendable, however, the battle against illegal wildlife trade, ivory and rhino horns in particular, remains an urgent matter to Viet Nam in order to ensure the rule of law, social stability, the conservation of wildlife in nature and international responsibility. In particular, the revised Penal Code 2015 coming into effect from 2018 with new provisions on violations of regulations on the management and protection of endangered and rare wildlife is a great change, setting out penalty ranges, increasing jail time, and help raising the strictness of laws against this type of crime. The Hanoi Statement on Combating illegal wildlife trade stated that Viet Nam joined as a host country together with 42 countries, territories, is a milestone marking the country’s great political commitment and enhances the nation’s image internationally. To put commitment into action, Viet Nam needs specific actions encourage inter-agency, regional and cross-border cooperation with specific objectives and outputs.

With all the factors above, a national action plan is required to (1) tackle the illegal trade of ivory, rhino horns to and from Viet Nam (2) continue implementing the planned initiatives, programs and plans. The NIRAP firstly meets the domestic needs and secondly fulfill the member state obligations that Viet Nam has committed to the international community.

II. RATIONALE
